

CONOPHYTUM ficiforme is a small succulent plant that is native to South Africa, and southern Namibia. Picture: supplied

Collectors drive a spike in theft of indigenous plants in the Western Cape

By Nomalanga Tshuma  May 20, 2021

Cape Town - CapeNature says it has noted a worrying spike in the theft of indigenous plants in the province.

It said it has begun to notice that crimes relating to the theft of endangered indigenous plants in the province had begun to steadily increase, even under strict Covid-19 restrictions.

CapeNature spokesperson Petro van Rhyn said while there were several reasons why the illegal trade had picked up recently, the most notable reasons pointed to the huge demand by plant collectors to own the naturally occurring plants, native to South Africa and Southern Namibia.

We use cookies to give you the best possible experience.

Learn more about how we use cookies.

X

these plants and has caused the developing demand for the species.”

Van Rhyn, however, added that prior to the coronavirus pandemic collectors would visit the country to collect for themselves illegally but, because of Covid-19 and restrictions put in place to curb the spread, collectors had been blocked from doing so.

MORE ON THIS

- Cops arrest 18 suspects for possessing endangered plant 'worth a lot of money'
- PhD student develops valuable quality grading system for honeybush tea
- Poaching along the Noordhoek wetlands is a growing threat to plant and animal species

"This did allow for successful prosecutions and large fines. Now, with travel bans, locals are used to collecting plants, which are sent to the collectors without risk to collectors in other countries of being caught and prosecuted/costs incurred in South Africa," said Van Rhyn.

Last week, police arrested 18 suspects for the possession of endangered species-flora Conophytum Ficiforme. One consignment confiscated by police was valued at R500 000.

Police spokesperson Captain FC van Wyk said: "Police arrested several suspects, in four unrelated cases, for the contravention of the Nature Conservation Act. The suspects were taken into police custody after they were found to be in possession of endangered indigenous plants known as the Conophytum Ficiforme.

"In the one incident, police were able to recover the plants said to be worth R500 000, after apprehending four suspects at the at Swawelskloof Farm, on the R43, in Worcester."

nomalanga.tshuma@inl.co.za

Cape Argus

CONSERVATION

CRIME AND COURTS

COVID-19

SHARE THIS ARTICLE:

Search IOL

FOLLOW IOL

We use cookies to give you the best possible experience.

Learn more about how we use cookies.

X

PICS + VIDEO: First skywalk of its kind in South Africa to open at God's Window

SA sisters 'strangled with cable ties' as report says mom may have been off her meds

'Woolies looter' may forfeit his R500 000 Mercedes-Benz to the State in 90 days

TRENDING ON IOL

#THIRDWAVE #TRUECRIME #HERITAGEMONTH

READ NEXT ON IOL

NGO hopes to ease food hunger in Cape's rural areas

1H AGO

SECTIONS ON IOL

News Sport Education Tech Business Report Entertainment Lifestyle
Motoring Travel Personal Finance Multimedia

FOLLOW IOL

MORE ON IOL

About IOL Contact Us Weather Advertise with us Feedback
Complaints Procedure

LEGAL

Press Code Privacy Policy Terms & Conditions

TRENDING ON IOL

#thirdwave #TrueCrime #HeritageMonth

NEWSLETTER SUBSCRIBE

We use cookies to give you the best possible experience.

Learn more about how we use cookies.

The Star Cape Argus Weekend Argus Daily News Cape Times
The Mercury Pretoria News Saturday Star The Independent on Saturday
Sunday Tribune Sunday Independent The Post Daily Voice Isolezwe

© 2021 Independent Online and affiliated companies. All rights reserved

Please visit the official Government information portal for Coronavirus by clicking HERE

We use cookies to give you the best possible experience.

Learn more about how we use cookies.

